Mideast peace talks resume in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israeli and Arab negotiators began direct peace talks Tuesday aimed at ending four decades of hostility, with all sides declaring they are ready to get down to business.

"I hope we're going to start negotiating seriously," said Yossi Ben Aharon, who heads the Israeli delegation trying to come to terms with Syria, after arriving at the State Department.

Mowafak al-Allaf, the chief Syrian peace delegate, said his country was offering peace for Israel if it withdraws from the Golan Heights, occupied during the 1967 War.

"We came to discuss all substantive issues and the Golan Heights is one of the most substantive issues in our case," al-Allaf said just before entering the talks. "We are offering peace for territory occupied by Israel, offering peace for ourselves and them."

Hanan Ashrawi, a Palestinian spokeswoman, said, "We are going to discuss issues of substance."

The United States and the Soviet Union are co-sponsors of the peace conference, which began Oct. 30 in Madrid, Spain.

The separate talks are between Israel and delegations representing Syria, Lebanon and the Jordanians and Palestinians jointly.

The Palestinians had asked they be permitted to field a separate delegation to the conference, but Israel rejected the idea and the State Department said that was not the agreed upon arrangement.

The talks were off limits for reporters and photographers.

It was not clear how long the conference would last. The Israelis said they wanted this phase to be short — perhaps lasting three days — and the talks then switched to the Middle East.

Slavic leaders say defense envoy backs proposed commonwealth

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russian leaders said Tuesday the Soviet defense minister supports "in principle" a new Slavic commonwealth as long as the military remains under a unified command.

And in reply to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's claims that the three republics acted unlawfully, the Ukrainian and Byelorussian parliaments voted to join Russia in the Commonwealth of Independent States.

Meanwhile, there were contradictory reports on whether Gorbachev was on the verge of resigning in the face of his rapidly dissolving union.

The Russian leaders—symbolically holding their first major commonwealth news conference at the Soviet Foreign Ministry—reiterated their assertion that the Soviet Union was dead and said Gorbachev could either support the new commonwealth or try to prevent the new alliance.

They said they were forging ahead to implement the agreement reached in Byelorussia over the Board to consider coal gasification, tuition plans

By Christiann Baxter
Administration Writer

The SIU Board of Trustees will vote Thursday on a revised proposal for the experimental coal gasification plant and a proposal for a partial tuition waiver for children of SIU employees.

The University received notice that approval for the experimental coal gasification plant on the Carverville campus cannot be approved by the Department of Education unless the University buys the land from the federal government.

The University was given a 23-acre piece of land from the federal government in 1989.

David Grobe, director for SIU facilities planning, said the deed required the land to be used for educational purposes.

The University asked for permission to construct an experimental coal gasification facility on the land, but the Department of Education said the plant was not of an educational nature.

The best way to get around that problem is for the University to buy the estimated 1.4 acres of land required for the facility from the federal government, Grobe said.

"This is the best alternative that we can tell," he said.

Harold Foster, assistant director of program development and coordination at the coal research center, said the situation is not alarming, but it would avoid a potential conflict.

"I believe it would be unfair to suggest that there is a problem," he said.

The board also will vote on a partial tuition waiver for the Big names surface at winter talks

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Two of baseball's marquee names, Jack Morris and Jose Canseco, occupied center stage Tuesday at the winter meetings.

On a day of minor maneuvering, the champion Minnesota Twins all but parted company with Morris, the star pitcher and native son who was the Most Valuable Player in the World Series.

General Manager Andy MacPhail said the Twins are unable to match Morris's salary request because of his club's small-market constraints, and the 36-year-old right-hander is not likely to return next year.

It was this very subject to which Commissioner Fay Vincent referred Monday in his State of the Game address.

"We don't have the same revenue as other teams," MacPhail said.

The New York Yankees, looking to recapture their place in the city following Mets' bombshell signing

Angels make three deals of Bobby Bonilla, held "exploratory" trade talks with the Oakland Athletics regarding Canseco.

No names were formally exchanged, but the Yankees, clearly short on glamour personnel, would have to unload a host of players to satisfy the Athletics' demands.

The Athletics face the prospect of 10 of their players becoming free agents after the 1992 season.

There is also the discomfort over a strained relationship between Canseco and Manager Tony La Russa.

"For every year Canseco stays with the A's, Tony ages 10 years," a former Oakland player said.

Canseco, a 27-year-old outfielder, signed through 1995 at nearly $1 million a year less than Bonilla's salary. He was the American League MVP in 1988 when he hit .307 with 42 homers and 40 stolen bases.

The California Angels, spurned by Bonilla and Wally Joyner, Tuesday went after fish far smaller than Morris or Canseco.

They dealt pitching prospects Mike Fetters and Glenn Carter to the Milwaukee Brewers for middle reliever Chuck Crim, then added utility player Hubie Brooks from the Mets.

Speedy point guard helps Salukis learn up-tempo play style

By Scott Wuerz

Anita Scott is used to being in the spotlight.

She averaged 18.5 points, 5.8 rebounds, and 6.5 assists a game during last season at St. Louis.

Now, she's at SIUC, and she's looking to continue her stellar performance.

During her third year at a Saluki junior, Scott has averaged 11.75 points and 4.75 rebounds in four games, but her contribution to the team is greater than her stats. She's a key player in the Saluki offense, and her ability to control the tempo of the game is invaluable.

The SIUC women's basketball team will not have much time to sing Christmas carols this holiday season because they will be too busy working on staying undefeated.

The 4-0 Salukis have one game and one tournament before Christmas, and their Gateway Conference schedule begins Jan. 2 at Wichita State.

SIUC's first contest over the holiday break will be Saturday against Evansville at the Arena. The team next will travel to Palo Alto, Calif., to compete in the Stanford Classic Dec. 19 and 20.

They will play North Carolina State and either Oral Roberts or Stanford.

SIUC head coach Cindy Scott said North Carolina State, which is ranked No. 9 in the nation this week, is an outstanding team.

"There is no other way to put it," she said.

"We are concentrating on our game against Evansville right now, so we will think about the Stanford Classic after that."

Scott said Wichita State spoiled the Salukis' season in 1990-91, and it is even better now.

The Shockers ranked fifth in the preseason poll and finished 6-21 overall last season and 3-15 in league play.

In a preseason poll, SIUC was chosen to finish second in the league behind defending Gateway Champion Southwest Missouri State. The Salukis face the Lady Bears Jan. 4.

Scott said the two games are very important contests for the team and will be difficult since they are on the road.

"It is going to be a tremendous challenge for us to go into Wichita and SMSU and win," she said. "It doesn't happen often. We

Herrin's Christmas list includes MVC title win

When Santa checks his list—then checks it again—he will have to take notice of the basketball Salukis and their spotless naughty/nice record.

The Dawgs have been very good so far this year, winning their first five games. But when it comes time for the red-clad jolly belly to decide what he's going to leave under the tree for little Richie Herrin, he may be at a loss. SIUC's sixth-year head coach may be the luckiest kid on the block.

Kris Kringle stuffed Herrin's stocking last year when he left him the foundation of a conference championship. Herrin added that loot to what he got the year before and pieced together a team more fierce than the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles.

Herrin is gifted with the preseason pick for player of the year, the preseason newcomer of the year, and SIUC's first ever 7-foot player. Those three stars—junior dunkster Ashraf Amaya, freshman phenom Marcus Timmons and sophomore giant Marcelo da Silva—along with a talented supporting cast and a deep bench, has given the Salukis an early lead in the MVC.

Yet, knowing how long the basketball season can be, Herrin may call on the jolly old elf to bring him a little more. And when Herrin gets his turn on Santa's lap, he may want to mention a few other things he will be able to use.

Tops on his list is the return of Kelvan Lawrence.

The senior forward was expected to play a key role for the Dawgs before being sidelined indefinitely with a broken ankle sustained in SIUC's win over Murray State last week.

Amaya's 23.8 points a game and 10.3 rebounds is tops in the MVC. The preseason pick by coaches and media for Player of the Year honors, also has a field

Green parties growing force, but U.S. versions still weedy

By Natalie Boehme
Special Assignment Writer

As public concern for the environment continues to grow, Green political parties are sprouting worldwide, but U.S. Greens are having difficulty taking root.

European Greens have experienced the most success in the political world. In the 1989 elections to the European Parliament, Green parties received more than 11 million votes, which is equivalent to 8.1 percent of the total vote. This was a gain of 17 seats for a total of 37 in the 518-member Parliament.

The U.S. Green political parties, however, have had a particularly rocky road with the domination of the two-party system and no proportional representation as many European nations have. Another factor is less concern among U.S. citizens.

In a 1990 Los Angeles Times survey asking readers to select the most urgent problems facing the United States, the environment ranked fifth. Of those surveyed, 15 percent included the environment among the top two concerns. However, in comparison, 14 percent placed unemployment at this level although it was at its lowest level in two decades.

Clara McClure, Sierra Club Shawnee Group's political action committee chairwoman, said Green candidates will have a difficult time competing in U.S. politics.

"Traditionally it has been very difficult for a third party to run so I think it would be more productive to

"I think you are going to see a growing amount of environmentalists active in politics."

—Joe Glisson

support Republican or Democratic candidates with environmental concerns," McClure said.

McClure said the Sierra Club has a list of nationally endorsed candidates who are supportive of the environment.

Joe Glisson, public education coordinator of Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, said he thinks environmentalists will become a large political force in the 1990s.

"I think you are going to see a growing amount of environmentalists active in politics. The environment is the most critical problem we have; we are poisoning our land, poisoning our air, poisoning our water. It will be the biggest political issue of the '90s."

Glisson said although St. Louis is the closest Green party to Carbondale, he thinks political environmentalists will grow rapidly in the area.

"President Roosevelt was the first environmentalist in politics," Glisson said. "It is not new that environmentalists are coming into politics, but it is new that folks are standing up and saying the environment is the most important factor.

Glisson said the St. Louis Greens have been active in helping RACE to stop the "massacre of the Shawnee Forest."

Because Greens only have one political platform, protecting the environment, there are concerns that their focus is too narrow to address all political concerns, but Glisson disagrees.

"There is nothing that is not touched and influenced by our environment," he said. "All the other factors in politics equal into the environment."

The idea of forming political parties rather than pressure groups to defend the environment is almost 20 years old, with the first party's formation in New Zealand in 1972.

This party, formed to slow growth and encourage conservation efforts, was conceived because of the fearful predictions being made in the United States in the late 1960s about the impending environmental catastrophe.

Apparently it was not just New Zealanders who were worried about the shape of the environment. As concern about nuclear power in the mid-1970's grew, Green political parties began sprouting up on all five continents in nations ranging from superpowers to developing countries.

Among these countries touting Green political parties are New Zealand, Australia, Turkey, Japan, Egypt, Switzerland, Sweden, Belgium, Finland Luxembourg, Tasmania, Canada, the United States, Mexico, Costa Rica, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil.

Schools need to give facts on AIDS, HIV

AMERICAN AWARENESS OF THE AIDS epidemic was born with a 1981 New York Times article documenting groups of gay men in New York City and San Francisco diagnosed with the incurable illness.

It came to a head Nov. 7 with pro basketball player Earvin "Magic" Johnson's admission that he had tested positive for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

Schoolchildren who might have considered AIDS a strictly "gay disease," but who adored Magic as a player, have been forced to think long and hard about the disease that has brought down their hero.

But it is difficult to think reasonably about the subject without knowing all the facts. It now falls to the public school system, where the majority of the nation's children and young adults are educated, to provide the real facts about HIV and AIDS.

THE GUIDELINES FOR PREVENTING AIDS are clear, having been stated over and over in the media since the mid-1980s: Barring abstinence, the use of a condom is the safest method of preventing sexually transmitted HIV.

But the warnings are not being heeded by America's young people. About 70 percent of U.S. teens aged 14 to 18 are sexually active, according to a recent survey by the National AIDS Task Force; but of that number, only 20 percent admit to practicing safe sex.

Perhaps the message has not gotten through because of the terms used in public school sex education. When Jackson County AIDS educators hold workshops at regional schools, words such as "intercourse" sometimes are forbidden by school administrators.

Discussing the effects of the disease but ignoring the routes by which it spreads clearly is not a wise policy—especially with AIDS diagnoses on the rise in largely rural areas such as Jackson County.

PARENTAL INTERFERENCE PRESENTS another stumbling block to education. Participation by a minor in a public school AIDS education program requires parental consent under Illinois law, and some Jackson County parents have refused to let their children hear the facts in school.

Some good may have come of the Magic affair. Since the star's disclosure, appointments made for HIV testing through the Jackson County Health Department and the Franklin/Williamson Bicounty Health Department have skyrocketed, backing up the departments' schedules into January 1992 in some cases.

BUT WHILE HEALTH-CONSCIOUS Southern Illinoisans line up for the HIV antibody test, who is giving their children the facts they need? AIDS education requires hard honesty, not euphemisms and dodging.

With this lethal disease stalking everyone, failure to educate American youth about AIDS is only compounding the problem. It is like sending children into the wilderness, naked and unarmed—and there is a pack of wolves about.

Student feels Visiting Artist Program needs commendation for all efforts

I am writing to thank the DE for their even handed editorial on the problems surrounding David Hecht's lecture for SIUC's Visiting Artist Program (VAP). In addition to laying out the facts of his reception here, I think it is also important to let people know how Mr. Hecht fits into the broader context of SIUC's far reaching Visiting Artist Program, as well as the art world's current interest in contemporary African artists.

In relation to the 1991/92 VAP as a whole, David Hecht represents a single voice out of a total of 24 artists and critics. The VAP seeks to add to the educational offerings available in Carbondale for both the academic and residential communities. Its purpose is not to duplicate academic offerings, but to broaden our knowledge and present alternate points of view.

As director of the program, Prof. Paulson must present an overview of con-temporary issues in art while offering a selection of artists working in different mediums (painting, sculpture, ceramics, metals, glass, etc.). He also balances the program in terms of gender and cultural heritage. The program this year has included mostly artists of color representing a myriad of different viewpoints within this country's African-American, Latin-American and Euro-American communities.

In the art world, Mr. Hecht represents one voice in what is turning out to be a wave of interest in contemporary African "visual culture." (A phrase that encompasses the Continents art historical traditions, African fine art from academic artists and art which rites out of popular culture such as wall paintings).

My overdue awakening began with the internationally based "Magiciens de la Terre," a controversial exhibition at the Pompidou Center in Paris which astounded audiences by juxtaposing relatively unknown artists, like Zairian painter Cheri Samba (trained as a sign painter), with his inter-nationally recognized academically trained counterparts. (Samba won't)

This exhibition was followed in 1990 by a show of primarily academically trained artists entitled "Contemporary African Artists: Changing Tradition" organized by the Studio Museum in Harlem. Next spring an ambitious exhibition on contemporary African "visual culture" will travel to the St. Louis Museum of Art.

Divided into four parts, the exhibition will cover traditional arts, new functional or popular arts, international (academically trained) artists and extinct art forms.

Regardless of how one feels about Mr. Hecht's excessively blunt commentary on his experiences in Africa or D. Abugarrishall Kai's heart felt (but problematic) rebuke to a lecture he did not attend, I feel it is important to commend the Visiting Artists Program on their record to date.

I urge professor Paulson to continue his efforts to expand (rather than contract!) our knowledge of the field.—Ms. Mel Watkin, artist/independent curator from Murphysboro.

Johnson should promote safe sex with spouse

Good natured pugnacity and diarrhea of the mouth. It runs in my family.

Take note of some family anecdotes: I'm sorry, did you say I was wrong? Why, that's impossible.

I don't know why we're like that. Perhaps it's because most people disagree with what we say, compounded by the fact that we feel passionately about, well, everything.

In any event, it certainly makes for lively living, which is a good thing. But it also results in spirited, half-thought-out retorts to serious questions. This is a bad thing when such retorts turn out to be obnoxious and self righteous at best, terribly offensive at worst.

Last week, a Daily Egyptian reporter asked me, a no-name student studying for finals in the Student Center, whether I thought Magic Johnson's efforts to promote safe sex would have an impact on student's here.

No way, I said, keeping with the family tradition. Not here, not anywhere. Sex isn't safe because students are amoral, decadent and promiscuous. And Magic Johnson wouldn't have AIDS today if he would have kept his... well, let's leave it at that.

Why do I make blanket statements like that which are: a) not true, b) obnoxious, and c) offensive. I feel obligated to issue an apology (sorry if I offended some of you), and an explanation (but not all of you).

I'm sorry Magic Johnson has AIDS. I wish he were still playing ball. But why is he promoting "safe sex" rather than "save safe sex for your spouse?"

You're laughing. But this isn't a novel idea. We all come from a variety of races, colors and creeds. And most of our creeds say sex is sacred. And promiscuity is wrong. (I'm being generous. Don't they say save sex for marriage?) And what's all this business about practice safe sex or be sorry?

Six months ago, before I came back to school, I probably would have answered the reporter's question a little differently. I still would have told him Magic Johnson's efforts would come to no avail. But I would have left out the attack on students.

The University has apparently decided that students, like animals, are uncontrollably lustful creatures, incapable of exercising sexual restraint. This is manifested in condom machines placed in many of the bathrooms on campus.

And to usher in the Christmas season, some student organization thoughtfully decorated a Christmas tree in the Student Center with cheerful placards reading "AIDS," "Herpes," and "Gonorrhea," to name a few.

Well, Merry Christmas. May your holiday be filled with safe sex and lots of it. Oh, and one more thing. I can get a rubber in the john, but where can I get an aspirin?—Mark O'Leary, unclassified graduate student.

'May you live in interesting times'

Mark Groble, senior in radio and television from Chicago, shows his opinion about the U.S. involvement in the Persian Gulf war with a gas nozzle flag handle. He was protesting at the Interfaith Center's vigil for peace in the Middle East in January. Despite protests against U.S. involvement, the ground war in Kuwait began Feb. 25 and officially ended three days later with an Iraqi surrender.

The year 1991 was one of turmoil, at home and in the gulf. It was a year of fiscal crisis for the nation, state and University. Although 'the best of times' may have been absent through most of 1991, the world is left as always with one small piece of hope—next year will come..

News Analysis

The Chinese do not consider interesting times a blessing. In fact, the phrase "May you live in interesting times" is considered a curse in Chinese culture.

But with the Persian Gulf war, the collapse of communism in the Soviet Union and the U.S. Supreme Court nomination of Clarence Thomas, 1991 still may go down in history as an interesting year, to say the least.

Arguably, the biggest news of 1991 was the use of U.S. military to force Saddam Hussein's army to withdraw from the peaceful but undemocratic nation of Kuwait.

The U.N. deadline for a peaceful retreat of Iraqi troops from Kuwait passed by unevenly on Jan. 15, prompting U.S. President George Bush to begin using missiles and jets to bomb Iraqi military installations.

Unlike Vietnam, many Americans supported the soldiers fighting in the war. But reaction to Bush's use of the military to enforce his "New World Order" in defense of the oil-producing Kuwait was mixed.

SIUC had a large anti-war protest in the Student Center on Jan. 26, and eight peace demonstrators were arrested during a sit-in at the Carbondale office of U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda.

The ground war in Kuwait began on Feb. 25, and the war officially ended three days later. U.S.-led troops forced the Iraqi army out of Kuwait, but failed to depose Saddam as leader of Iraq, which many felt left the military's mission unfulfilled.

In Illinois, Jim Edgar took office as governor on Jan. 14, promising to strive for quality education in the state. One month later, the state recalled $1.2 million from the SIUC budget in a rescission to help the state meet expenses.

On June 12, Gov. Edgar called the state fiscal condition "the worst we've ever been in" and vowed to cut funding in all areas, even necessary services, to help the state stay on budget. The next day, the Illinois Department of Revenue estimated it was owed about $1.1 billion in unpaid taxes, but poor computer systems and incomplete records made collection unlikely.

State legislators were unable to compromise on a budget by July 1, forcing them to work 17 days past the deadline and delay state payments and paychecks to 21,000 state employees in the meantime.

When the dust had settled, SIUC's 1992 budget from the state was $500,000 lower than its 1991 budget of $236 million, and Illinois legislators had racked up $300,000 in overtime pay for their extra work.

The Chronicle of Higher Education reported on Nov. 6 that state support for Illinois colleges dropped $10 million with the Eight-day Hanukkah festival symbol of accomplishments

By William Ragan
Special Assignment Writer

Hanukkah is often referred to as the "Jewish Christmas," but the eight-day festival bears little resemblance to the Christian holiday.

Rabbi Jeffrey Alick, director of the U of I Hillel Foundation, said Hanukkah differs greatly from Christmas.

"It's the most minor holiday we have," Alick said. "It's not really a holiday; it's just a festival. It's very coincidental that it falls near Christmas."

Frank Isaacs, executive director of the Zionist Organization of Chicago, said Hanukkah represents important accomplishments for Jews.

"(Hanukkah) is a victory of the spirit, a victory against oppression, a victory for human values and religious freedom," Isaacs said.

Hanukkah, which ended this week, is the Jewish winter festival that falls on the 25th of the month of Kislev and lasts eight days. It celebrates the victory of the Maccabees over combined forces of Syria and Greece after a three-year battle in the second century B.C.

The Jews battled for freedom of oppression and religious tolerance in the war, which ended on 174 B.C.

The festival of eight days was introduced because the Jews were unable to celebrate the eight-day festival of Sukkot during the war.

The title of "festival of lights" comes from a Talmudic legend that says the Maccabees found only one small jar of oil to burn in the menorah, or candelabrum, in the Temple.

The jar was sealed with the seal of the high priest but contained only enough oil to burn for a single night. By a miracle, the oil burned for eight nights.

It consequently was ordained that lights be kindled on the eight nights of Hanukkah, a practice that continues to this day. The menorah is lit in the synagogue as well as in the home.

Illustration by William Mullican

The majority of Jews use candles for the Hanukkah lights. One light is kindled on the first night, two on the second night, and so forth until all eight are lit.

To avoid lighting the candles one from the other, another candle known as the shamash, or retainer, is used to light the others.

During the daily prayers are read that thank God for delivering the strong into the hands of the weak, the many into the hands of the few, the impure into the hands of the pure and the wicked into the hands of the righteous.

The Torah is read on each day of Hanukkah and the passages read are from the account of the gifts brought by the princes at the dedication of the Tabernacle.

Children play a game with a spinning top, called a dreidel, on each side of which is a different letter representing a move in the game. These letters are the initial letters of the Hebrew words making up the sentence, "A great miracle happened there."

Now, it is customary for children to receive presents on Hanukkah, a practice which most likely coincides with the giving of Christmas presents.

Serious political rifts overshadow summit of Muslim world leaders

DAKAR, Senegal (UPI) — More than 40 Muslim nations began a four-day summit here Monday with their agenda overshadowed by serious rifts among member states and the absence of some important Arab leaders.

Leaders of the 46-member Islamic Conference Organization (ICO) were expected to discuss subjects ranging from the Arab-Israeli conflict and the Gulf War's effect on the Islamic world to the situation of Muslim minorities around the world.

Before the summit, ICO foreign ministers voiced support for the U.S.-and Soviet-sponsored Middle East peace talks held in Madrid in October and continuing now in Washington, D.C.

The Dakar summit, the ICO's sixth since its 1966 creation, convenes despite serious division within the Arab world sparked by the Gulf war.

A handful of Arab States including Jordan, Sudan, Yemen, Tunisia and the Palestine Liberation Organization sided with Iraq after its Aug. 6, 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

Most, including Egypt, took a firm stand against the Iraqi invasion and sent troops to fight alongside the U.S.-led coalition troops for the liberation of Kuwait. Syrian troops also joined the Western forces.

Neither Egyptian President Mubarak nor Syrian President Hafez Assad are participating in the summit.

Iran, a leading member of the ICO, is participating, however, with President Hashemi Rafsanjani leading the Iranian delegation.

Rafsanjani welcomed the trend adopted by Soviet Muslim republics to gain independence.

"As a member of the ICO, we welcome the freedom of these republics and believe that their presence will further strengthen our Islamic family," Rafsanjani said.

This statement was his most public show of support for attempts by Soviet Muslim republics to break away from the Soviet Union.

Iran boycotted the 1987 summit held in Kuwait as a protest against the Gulf Cooperations States' support of Iraq in its war with Iran.

This time, Kuwait complained about Iraq, with Kuwait's emir, Sheikh Jaber Al Ahmad Al Sabah, opening the summit by attacking Iraq for invading his oil-rich emirate.

"Iraq waged a war on a neighboring and Muslim country which had no result but loss of life, homelessness and destruction," he said.

Jaber accused Iraqi President Saddam Hussein of continuing to violate international laws, particularly a United Nations Security Council resolution which set the condition for a permanent cease-fire in the Gulf war.

Kuwait has claimed that Iraq still holds more than 2,000 Kuwaiti prisoners of war despite a U.N. resolution calling for their release.

Also addressing the conference was Senegal's President Abdou Diouf, who called for more cooperation among Muslim states at a time when the world is passing through dramatic and radical changes.

Summit sources said they expected Libya to rally support for its confrontation with the United States, Britain and France over their charges that Libyan agents were responsible for blowing up two civilian airliners in 1988 and 1989 over Lockerbie, Scotland and Niger.

like," said Rink said. "It's not like it supports an ecosystem. The squirrels and birds will still be there. It would look better and be safer. As it is now, there are dead limbs hanging over the path and they could kill someone."

Lovina R. Thompson sold the 20-acre area to SIUC for $6,500 in 1940.

The last reported sexual assault in the woods was in January 1990, but Thompson Woods used to be a problem area for campus police.

"In 1983 we had a big storm that knocked down most of the lighting on the trails and now that there's no lights, people avoid it," said Sgt. Nelson Ferry of the SIUC Police.

University Police patrol the brightly path area, but Nelson said the area is so dense with undergrowth, officers cannot not see from one path to another.

Kris Wessel, coordinator for the Rape Action Committee, said she would like to see a compromise of all three GPSC proposals.

"I think it might be wise to do all three," Wessel said. "The University may be liable for things that go on in the woods. They have already acknowledged that the area is a risk area and their current hands-off policy may cost them, too."

Wessel rape victims have started suing those responsible for neglect in the areas where the rapes occurred.

"The cost of lighting the path or putting fences around the woods will be a lot less than a few million dollar settlements," she said.

Grounds superintendent Bruce Francis said the woods could be cleared in three to four years at the current SIUC budget and department manpower.

"The University's official policy has been hands off," Francis said. "But in my opinion the woods be a greater benefit if they were cleared and managed. It would be a considerable job."

Clearing would include removal of poison ivy, honeysuckle and some of the smaller trees, Francis said. The dead overhanging limbs or "widow-makers" also would have to be removed.

"The project could be done without chemicals, which seems to be the major sticking point," he said.

Even if officials decided to clear the woods of underbrush, nobody is certain they would agree on a method of doing so.

"There would be some considerable work involved in removing the undergrowth," Rink said. "They could use a herbicide or a periodic subscribed burn of the area."

Burning the undergrowth may be the best available way of clearing the woods, Rink said, but he cautioned that it would have to be done under close supervision and completed when students were on break.

"A periodic subscribed burn may actually help the woods out," Rink said. "The burn would help return some of the nutrients from the dead wood and leaves to the trees."

Smith is accused of raping a Palm Beach, Fla., woman.

The trial is a swearing contest, Schroeder said.

"I'd let darn near everything in about these people. It's a swearing contest. What reason is there to believe one over the other if they're both believable," he said.

SIU law student Fred Schlosser agreed.

"It is kind of like the Anita Hill and Clarence Thomas hearings. It's a swearing contest between the both of them. It's left up to the integrity of the jury to decide who they believe," said Schlosser, a third year law student from Springfield.

The judge has been fair because she also has denied damaging background on the alleged victim, Schlosser said. But sometimes extraneous information is a major factor in whether the jury would believe one side or the other.

Law students have had many opportunities to judge and evaluate trials through classroom learning, but Schlosser said seeing the difference between what the judge allows the jurors to hear in court and what the general public has access to in the media is interesting.

"The judge controls the tempo of the trial—she denied three witnesses for the prosecution who said (Smith) did the same thing to them. However, the jurors are sequestered," he said.

Schlosser said the broadcast of the trial has come at a good time for SIUC law students because they have had finals for two weeks.

"I've had more opportunity to see it and it is curious to see what a trial is like in real life," he said.

Rebecca Whittington, a lawyer in the Carbondale law firm of Feirich, Schoen, Mager, Green, said the televised trial is a good learning experience for those who watch.

"People are seeing that trials are not just walking in and unloading information and saying 'jury decide,'" she said. "Trials are very orchestrated and calculated procedures."

She has seen parts of the trial on television and thinks the cross examination by the prosecutor is particularly effective, Whittington said.

"People are starting to see that trial litigation is more like a chess game with calculated moves," she said. "The first move (by an attorney) may not be important, but it will make the opponent do something else (that is more important to the case)."

The Israelis, who stayed away from the Washington talks for a week arguing they needed extra time, declared their readiness to negotiate on Monday, but this time it was the Arabs who balked.

Palestinians, instead, commemorated the fourth anniversary of their uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories of West Bank and Gaza Strip. They attended services at St. Sophia's Orthodox Cathedral in Washington and prayed for peace.

Other Arab delegates professing solidarity also refused to come to the peace table on Monday.

On Tuesday, a group of people demonstrated at the State Department to demand recognition of a Palestinian state and condemned Israeli housing in the occupied territories of the West Bank.

One banner read, "Stop Israeli Settlements Now. We Won't Give Up Our Rights Of Return." Another sign said, "We Demand U.S. Recognition Of The PLO And Its Presence At The Peace Conference. Self Determination For The Palestinian People."

Israeli supporters held banners welcoming delegates to the United States for the peace talks.

On the eve of the talks, U.S. officials held a series of separate talks with both sides to guard against surprises.

At the White House, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the administration hopes the talks will focus on "substantive" issues.

"This is a historic opportunity for peace that cannot be lost," Fitzwater said. "We feel that a good foundation for these talks was established in Madrid."

Saying that the "world is watching," Fitzwater promised the United States will continue to support the peace process "in any way we can."

Binyamin Netanyahu, Israeli deputy minister, said Monday his country has been trying "to keep the momentum going" since the first phase of the peace conference.

weekend without counting on Gorbachev's participation or support.

Russian Deputy Prime Minister Gennadi Burbulis said Soviet Defense Minister Yevgeny Shaposhnikov supports in principle the new commonwealth and its plan for a unified military in the three Slavic republics of Russia, Ukraine and Byelorussia.

The Russian official said commonwealth leaders informed Shaposhnikov of their agreement and reassured him that the three republics intended to maintain "a unified command, a single joint strategic space."

"Marshal Shaposhnikov was fully supportive of this formula," the Russian deputy prime minister said. "In principle, he supports the main thrust of the agreement on this question."

The Russians, however, skirted a question on whether the commonwealth leaders or Gorbachev controls the Soviet military. Burbulis said, "The armed forces are under the command of Marshal Shaposhnikov."

Pressed further, Burbulis said, "I think that this is something that can be resolved in the next few days. The reaction by the armed forces commanders was not negative in any sense. We have not detected anything of that kind."

However, Gen. Yuri Maximov, commander in chief of the Soviet strategic forces, told the newspaper Izvestia that only the Soviet President was the "owner" of the country's nuclear arsenal, but he left open the possibility for change.

"In reality," Maximov said, "there exists only one nuclear state, the Soviet Union as a whole or the state structure which will become its successor in law."

children of SIU employees effective Jan. 1, 1992.

The board was directed by the state legislature to offer 50-percent tuition waivers to the children of employees who have been with the University for seven or more years.

The governor's veto of the bill was overridden in mid-November.

To receive this benefit, the student must be under 25. It does not apply for graduate students.

Ruth Bernhardt, SIUC personnel officer, said the number of employees with college-age children has not yet been determined.

Official: Preparing for LSAT makes difference in scores

By Katie Fitzgerald
General Assignment Writer

When it comes to studying for the Law School Admissions Test, sometimes the early bird gets the worm.

Scott Nichols, admissions director for the SIU School of Law, said students should start preparing for the test four to six weeks ahead of time.

The next scheduled test date is in February, nine weeks away.

"It's important to prepare thoroughly, I can't emphasize that enough," Nichols said.

The method of preparation depends on the individual. It is important to just prepare in some way, he said.

"Students can expect a challenging rigorous intellectual experience," Nichols said.

The LSAT is a half-day standardized test administered by the Law School Admissions Council. It contains five-35 minute sections of multiple choice questions.

The test includes a reading comprehension section, an analytical reasoning section, two logical reasoning sections and a non-scored section of new questions to determine their effectiveness on future tests.

The test is designed to measure skills students will need in law school.

Scores range from a low of 120 to 180.

At SIU School of Law, LSAT counts 50 percent toward admission consideration, Nichols said. In comparison to past scores, Nichols said he expects median admission score next fall to be in the 67th percentile, a score of 155.

The applicants undergraduate grade point average constitutes the remaining 50 percent of admission consideration. Nichols expects the median GPA to be between 3.2 or 3.3, he said.

Last year, the LSAC reported that it administered 150,000 admission tests to students hoping to gain acceptance into law schools.

These students had many preparation options available to them.

The key to preparation is to take mock LSATs to simulate time restrictions, Nichols said.

Practice tests can be obtained in commercial self study books and courses.

"Someone who has really good self discipline can benefit from self help books. However, someone needing a more regimented situation, should enroll into courses," Nichols said.

SIUC Continuing Education offers an LSAT prep course with materials from the Fairfax Lectern Company.

The course involves 32 classroom and 16 home study hours of preparation. It also provides a two-hour cram session a few days before the test, said Margaret O'Meara, Fairfax Lectern national accounts director.

Continuing Education offers the program for $260 or $225 if student register before Jan. 31. University faculty leads the sessions. The next session begins March 28 and continues from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on four consecutive Saturdays.

Nutrition expert: Use of caffeine for finals foolish

By Jeremy Finley
General Assignment Writer

SIUC student Bill Patula headed into finals this week with a soda.

The freshman from Carbondale said the caffeine keeps him going.

"Caffeine keeps me awake," he said. "The jitters it gives makes me study more."

But a nutrition and fitness coordinator for the Wellness Center said Patula and hundreds of SIUC students like him who try to keep going through Finals Week with caffeine are not really doing much for their bodies.

Students may use caffeine to stay awake during finals, but caffeine only works for about an hour and then slows down, said coordinator Kate Zager.

"How much a person is affected by caffeine depends on the amounts of caffeine they intake everyday," Zager said.

Chris Labyk, coordinator of the Student Health Assessment Center, said people who drink three to four cups of a caffeinated beverage a day may become dependent.

"What caffeine does is dilate the blood vessels to the heart and constrict the blood vessels to the brain," Labyk said.

Students who drink sodas and coffee to help during late study hours may be lessening their chances for better grades.

"Staying up late to catch that extra hour of studying may not be a good idea because the caffeine high won't be there in the morning," Zager said.

Some signs of caffeine dependency are sleepiness, irritability and an overall nervous disposition, she said. It also can cause diarrhea and increase cholesterol levels.

And stopping caffeine intake does not mean students will slow down.

"People who stop using caffeine report that their energy levels are steadier than they were when they were using caffeine," Zager said.

Withdrawal symptoms occur 12 to 16 hours after caffeine intake. They can include depression, headaches and drowsiness.

Human rights activists around world honored

BOSTON (UPI) — Three men killed forming a human barrier when tanks surrounded the Russian Parliament building during last August's failed attempt to overthrow the Soviet government were among those honored Tuesday with the 1991 Reebok Human Rights Awards.

Also honored during the fourth annual ceremony were young human rights activists from Mozambique, El Salvador, Florida, Guatemala, New Jersey and Cuba. The awards are given annually to young people who against great odds significantly raise awareness of human rights.

"Today we honor young people who often work in lonely darkness. We are here to shine a bright light on these young people and what they have done for all of us," said Paul Fireman, chief executive officer of Reebok International.

Former President Jimmy Carter also spoke at the ceremony at the Park Plaza Castle in Boston.

Receiving special posthumous awards were Dmitri Alexandrovich Komar, 23, Ilya Maratovich Krichevsky, 28, and Vladimir Alexandrovich Usov, 37, who were killed Aug. 20 defending the Russian Parliament building from being overrun by military forces loyal to the coup.

Their parents attended the ceremonies and accepted the special tributes to their dead sons.

Reebok, an athletic-wear company based in Stoughton, Mass., established its Human Rights Award in 1988.

'Son of Sam' ruling rejected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Tuesday declared unconstitutional New York's "Son of Sam" law, which takes profits a criminal makes from telling his story and sets them aside for victims of his crimes.

The court reversed a decision of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, finding the law violates the First Amendment's protection of freedom of expression.

But the ruling, written by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, specified that it was referring solely to New York's "significantly over-inclusive" law, and that the decision does not necessarily strike down similar statutes in place in the federal government and more than 40 states patterned after New York's groundbreaking law.

O'Connor noted that such a statute could be deemed constitutional if it was "narrowly drawn" and shown "necessary to serve a compelling state interest."

In this case, while the "compelling state interest" to

Victims of criminals can no longer reap profits from story compensate crime victims is evident, the law is too broad, the court found.

The law required that a publisher contracting with a criminal for his story turn over to the New York State Crime Victims Board the money the criminal was to have been paid. The board held the money for five years in an escrow account, from which any victim of that person's crimes who won a civil suit can draw the money.

Any funds remaining in the account after five years are returned to the criminal. The law defined a criminal not only as a convict—but anyone accused of a crime or who admits to a crime, even if he or she was never prosecuted.

It also extended the statute of limitations for filing a civil suit to last throughout the five years the money is held in escrow.

The law violated the First Amendment largely because it specified that only proceeds from storytelling about the crime—rather than any other assets of the criminal—are targeted, and by including even "crimes" for which a storyteller never was charged.

The Son of Sam law was enacted in 1977 during New York City's search for the "Son of Sam" killer, after legislators heard that the serial killer (David Berkowitz)—who had yet to be captured—was likely to be offered large sums of money for his story.

New York argued the law is needed to ensure that criminals do not profit financially from their actions while their victims or families of their victims suffer.

"The state's interest in compensating victims from the fruits of crime is a compelling one, but the Son of Sam law is not narrowly tailored to advance that objective," wrote O'Connor.

Smith says woman snapped after sex on Kennedy grass

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — William Kennedy Smith testified in his rape trial Tuesday that his accuser picked him up at a bar, had sex voluntarily with him, then "sort of snapped" and accused him of rape.

"I'm innocent," Smith said. "I don't understand why (the woman) would accuse me of doing this. I don't understand why anybody would attack someone's family, ruin his career."

Saying, "I'm very nervous," Smith told his story for the first time since a 30-year-old Jupiter, Fla., accused him of raping her on the lawn of the Kennedy's Palm Beach estate after she drove him home from a bar Marci 30.

He said they had two sexual encounters—when the woman masturbated him on the beach and when they had intercourse later on the estate lawn.

He repeated that the rape

allegation is a "damnable lie."

But under cross-examination by prosecutor Moira Lasch, Smith said he would not characterize his encounter with the woman as an act of love—the words used by defense attorney Roy Black in his opening statement.

"I know Roy Black used the words 'act of love,'" Smith said. "Those were not my words. I think probably I would have used other words. I think I would have said, 'We had sex.'"

Smith, under questioning by Black, described how the woman brushed into him at Au Bar in Palm Beach while he was waiting to get the bartender's attention, chatted with him and then accepted his invitation to dance.

"We were kissing on the dance floor and we were close together," he said. "I was feeling that I had gotten picked up."

They danced until the bar closed and the woman drove him to the Kennedy estate because his companions, his uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Kennedy's son Patrick had left.

In the parking lot at the Kennedy home, Smith said, he and the woman kissed again and the woman excused herself for a few minutes to remove her pantyhose in the car.

He said they sat by the pool, dipping their toes in the water, when the woman started making irrational conversation that she had been to the Kennedy home before, calling him Michael and asking to see his identification.

"I thought she had me confused with someone else or she was 'disoriented,'" Smith said.

Smith said the woman accepted his invitation to go swimming and he grabbed a beach towel off a railing, walked toward the ocean and spread the towel on the sand.

HUD questions Chicago's ability to oversee new housing project

CHICAGO (UPI) — The federal government has questioned whether the Chicago Department of Housing is competent to run a new multimillion dollar housing program, a published report said.

The Housing and Urban Development review of federally funded single-family rehabilitation projects managed by the Chicago department found "critical overriding problems in program administration," the Chicago Reporter said.

The agency's review, a copy of which the publication obtained, was hampered by inaccuracies and incompleteness of department records.

HUD found the city in 1990 paid nine staff members $304,000 to oversee 18 units, an average of two units per staff member.

Donna Smithy, executive director of People's Housing, said Mayor Richard Daley inherited the problems but failed to do anything about them, allowing them to grow worse.

Government posts debt of $10.5 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States had a foreign trade deficit of $10.5 billion in the third quarter, fed by higher imports, forgiveness of foreign debt and fewer contributions from Persian Gulf War, the government said Tuesday.

Record foreign sales and payments by allies in the war had helped the United States post its first back-to-back trade surpluses since 1982 in the first two quarters of the year.

The Commerce Department said in the July-to-September period, the nation's current account again was in the red, with a $10.5 billion deficit rather than the upward revised $3 billion surplus for the second quarter. That's the largest deficit since the final quarter of 1990 when it was $23.4 billion.

The current account is the country's most significant trade measure because it includes not simply trade in merchandise but also services and investment flows between nations.

An increase in the merchandise trade deficit — to $20.5 billion in the third quarter from $15.4 billion in the second — was one of the main reasons for the current account deficit. The increase was more than accounted for by a jump in imports to $125 billion from $119.6 billion. Exports increased slightly to $104.5 billion from $104.2 billion.

Another reason for the deficit is that cash contributions received from allied nations for Persian Gulf War costs fell to $4.6 billion from $11.6 billion in the second quarter and $22.7 billion in the first quarter, when the war ended.

A third reason for the deficit, the Commerce Department said, was that the United States forgave $2.9 billion in debt to several countries, including Poland, during the third quarter.

The current account deficit for all of 1990 was $92.1 billion. This year's deficit is expected to be less than half that, thanks to stronger exports and the war contributions.

The trade deficit with the rest of the world shot to record levels during the booming 1980s, causing billions of dollars to be sent overseas to pay for imported goods.

Books make good presents for holiday season

University News Service

You want to spend less than $25 for a nice Christmas gift for someone of uncertain size and taste who doesn't wear a tie.

A book could be the perfect gift: there's no need to worry about size, many books can appeal to a wide range of adult tastes, and all 31 books on the Dec. 1 New York Times best-seller list cost less than $25.

A good source for gift suggestions might be the professionals who work with books, such as librarians. What books do they like to read and to give?

Regina M. Shelton, supervisor of the reserve desk and browsing room at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale's Morris Library, says she usually buys books with a local-interest angle for her five sons, who grew up in Carbondale. Last year she gave "The Flag on the Hilltop," by Mary Tracy Earle.

Originally published in 1902, the Civil War novel tells about a true event that took place in Makanda. A 1989 reprint includes a new introduction by area author Herbert K. Russell.

Shelton suggests that some readers may appreciate a Christmas gift of Alexandra Ripley's "Scarlett," the sequel to "Gone With the Wind." Others might prefer the World War II drama, "Night Over Water" by Ken Follett, a favorite author of Shelton's. History buffs might enjoy the Lyndon B. Johnson biography, "Lone Star Rising," by Robert Dallek.

Roland C. Person, assistant undergraduate librarian, also suggests Follett as an author who pleases a number of readers. His most recent suspense-drama is No. 7 on the Times list. Another popular author is Sidney Sheldon, whose latest, "The Doomsday Conspiracy," is No. 9 on the Times list.

Person is a whodunit fan and favors those of Dick Francis, whose "Comeback" is No. 6 on the best-seller list. He also recommends a personal nonfiction favorite, "Ragman and Other Stories," by Walter Wangerin. It's about how faith works in people's lives.

Though he's a fan of Katherine Hepburn's, Person says he'll pass on the new Hepburn autobiography, "ME: Stories of My Life." The book has been selling well, No. 2 on the non-fiction Times list, but it got a number of unfavorable reviews, he said.

Thomas L. Kilpatrick, interlibrary loan librarian, is an avid recreational reader who carries some clout with other librarians—he writes book reviews for the Library Journal, a publication for library professionals.

Kilpatrick is giving "Scarlett," which is No. 1 on the New York Times list, and "The Summer of the Danes," by Ellis Peter, which doesn't appear on the list. Peters, a favorite author of Kilpatrick's, is a British woman who writes mysteries about a 12th century monk. Her latest novel is 18th in the series.

Another of Kilpatrick's favorites is Clyde Edgerton, author of "Walking Across Egypt," whose latest novel is "Killer Diller." Edgerton is a Southern writer who's been praised for vivid character studies.

For readers interested in Southern Illinois history, Kilpatrick suggests the 1991 reprint of "History 31st Regiment Illinois Volunteers Organized by John A. Logan," which tells the stories of Southern Illinois men who gathered in Williamson County to fight under Logan in the Civil War.

Christmas presents can introduce kids to science—chemistry profs

University News Service

These days, kids don't get much of a bang out of that old Christmas standby, the chemistry set.

"Color changes, explosions, flashes of light—that's what kids like, but (manufacturers consider them) too dangerous," said John B. Phillips, a chemistry professor from Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. "Chemistry sets that are simple and not dangerous are usually not interesting either."

Some of the best stuff for sparking an interest in science comes not from the toy store but from the trade, said two SIUC researchers. Topping their list: Edmund Scientific, a Barrington, N.J., science supply company.

"We buy things out of this for our own work, but it's also good for the general consumer—it's a neat place," said chemistry professor David F. Koster, waving a glossy copy of the company catalog.

The firm stocks a gaggle of gizmos, from $4-and-$5 hot air balloons to $200-and-up lasers.

"That's fairly expensive, but lasers open up the whole world of holography," said John W. Shriver, an SIUC medical biochemist.

Another professional catalog, "Finn Scientific" out of Batavia, Ill., runs a "chemistry of toys" section complete with a recipe for giant soap bubble solution.

"You can make gallons of the stuff for just pennies," Koster said.

Shriver also recommends Heath Co., a Benton Harbor, Mich., firm specializing in electronics kits. High schoolers could knock out such high-tech items as video cameras and stereo synthesizers, while the younger set rigs up some $15 burglar alarms.

"I think every kid would love an alarm for his room," Shriver said.

Some of the more traditional science gifts still pack a punch. Phillips opts for the small telescope.

"You can use it at night to look at planets and during the day to spy on your neighbors," he said.

Shriver goes for the microscope.

"It's something kids can use to explore on their own," said Shriver, who remembers finding one in his own stocking years ago.

"It's not hard to make the slides—all you need is a single-edge razor blade."

Specimens are everywhere.

"You can go out and collect some old grass, combine it with water, let it ferment, and you'll get some really interesting micro-organisms," he said.

Profs investigate anti-drug projects in smaller towns

University News Service

A husband and wife research team at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale will soon begin a nationwide look at small cities and towns as part of a project to turn up "unique and promising" anti-drug strategies.

James Garofalo, director of SIUC's administration of justice department, and M. Joan McDermott, assistant professor in the department, hope to pinpoint programs that can serve as community models.

While there's plenty of available information on anti-drug efforts in big cities, almost none exists on small-town campaigns, he said.

"Towns everywhere are trying to develop their own programs and there's a lot of wasted effort," Garofalo said. If promising programs have been developed, "there's no reason to try to reinvent the wheel," Garofalo said.

The researchers don't expect to find mirror images of big-city drug culture in the smaller communities. "We don't expect whole sections of communities to be dominated by drug activities," Garofalo said. "In cities, you can have a large, adult, drug subculture because of the anonymity. You can't have that in small cities and towns."

The violent drug commerce that ties up police squadrons in America's urban ghettos isn't likely to be a problem for smaller towns, Garofalo suspects. "Anti-drug efforts there are more likely focused on youth and prevention," he said.

In the study's first stage, Garofalo, McDermott and a team of graduate students, will telephone community, school and law enforcement officials in about 250 communities.

Theater chairman picked art over law

By Casey Hampton
Entertainment Writer

The chairman of the theater department might have become the next Perry Mason—but he stumbled upon the arts.

"My original idea was to go to law school, probably because I had a romantic idea of criminal lawyers—you know, always getting their man," said Christian Moe, who has spent the past 33 years on the faculty in the department.

"But then I took an introduction to criminal law course, and it sobered me to what the law was really about," he added with a laugh.

Working 14-hour days in the Department of Theater, Moe spends about eight hours at his desk in a confined office, which is covered from floor to ceiling in papers and production posters.

His duties as chairman of the department bring with them much responsibility, including scheduling classes, assigning teaching loads, evaluating faculty, dealing with complaints and overseeing theater productions.

But as administrator over the department, the problems do not necessarily end when the curtains

Calls budget cuts most painful part of job close and the applause sets in. Severe budget cuts have recently stolen the show.

Moe described the financial dilemma as his most painful experience in the last three years as permanent chairman.

It is he, with the advice of others, who must decide what must be cut because of a lack of funds.

If the money situation continues as it is now, one of the two musicals during McLeod Theater's summer productions will be chopped from existence, Moe said with obvious disappointment.

"You can do more with less to a certain extent, but I think if there was any fat, most of it's gone," Moe said. "Now it's like saying, 'What would you rather cut off, your right arm or your left?'"

But the show must go on.

Moe has written three books, directed 60 to 65 productions and written 12 plays throughout his career, as well as acting numerous times.

"Theater gives you a chance to express yourself, but you must also make it work for those who come and see it," Moe said. "You're doing more than selling soap—not that there is anything wrong with selling soap."

Moe was first exposed to theater through the various number of shows in New York City, where he grew up in an upper middle class family.

His father was an executive for a foundation that rewarded people in the arts and humanities, so Moe got to meet many famous people.

"It was a very rich environment to grow up in," he said. "The atmosphere always exposed me to the arts."

Moe attended a private high school after graduating from a public grade school and got a look at both sides of the education coin.

"Neither was any better than the other," he said. "But there was a certain kind of confinement in the prep school I was eager to get out of when I went to college."

His initial plan once in college was to enter law school, as his father wanted.

But he grew out of that and decided to choose his own course, he said.

After graduating from college as a history major, he served in the Navy for two years of active duty during the Korean War, an experience which matured him quickly, he said.

Moe went back to school after leaving the service and furthered his studies in theater.

He now makes his home two blocks from the University with his wife. His two sons have both married and live in different states.

Cameron Garbutt, a retired associate professor of speech pathology at SIUC, once acted with Moe.

"Chris and I have known one another for about 30 years," he said. "We once scripted an adaptation of 'Tom Sawyer.'"

Garbutt said Moe's experience in acting, directing and writing have given him much experience for in his position as chairman.

"He is very easy to get along with," Garbutt said. "He's a scholar in every degree."

'Kong' fetches record bucks at Christie's sale

NEW YORK (UPI) — A poster for the 1933 RKO classic, "King Kong," was sold at auction Monday for $57,200, setting a new world auction record for a movie poster.

The poster portraying Kong climbing the Empire State Building with Fay Wray clutched in his hand was sold at Christie's East gallery to an anonymous collector.

The previous world record was $37,500 for a poster for "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," a 1919 Bioscope film, set last December in Christie's first movie poster sale.

"It was standing-room-only at the sale, our second in this field of collectibles," said Josh Arter, Christie's assistant vice president. "There was highly competitive bidding which clearly shows the solidity and continued growth of this new and exciting market."

Two other lots in the sale also topped the previous record.

Program enables students to write across age gap

By Teri Lynn Carlock
General Assignment Writer

Students from the SIUC College of Education are experiencing grade school again—this time through the eyes of a different child.

Fifteen students have paired off as penpals with fourth grade students from St. Mary's Catholic School in Chester.

Lynn Smith, associate professor of curriculum and instruction, arranged for her students to become penpals with the fourth graders after she observed a professor's class at SIUC that was corresponding with second graders.

"It is common to have young students write back and forth to each other, but it is unusual to have elementary and college students be penpals," she said.

In August Smith talked with Sharon Krah, a fourth grade teacher at St. Mary's about whether she would like her class have penpals with some of her students. Krah agreed with the idea because she wanted her students to have a chance to see into a different world.

"Most of the young students had no connections with people in college," Smith said. "Having a penpal in college could raise the students' aspirations."

When the students started to correspond with the fourth graders in October, it was the first time most of the children had ever addressed an envelope, Smith said. But not long after the pairs began to write back and forth, improvements were evident in the children's work.

They are more careful about what they write and proofread their work before sending it, Smith said.

The fourth graders write about the books they are reading, their likes and dislikes and the towns where they are from, Krah said.

The SIUC students also have been enthusiastic about having penpals, Smith said.

"They are learning a fair amount about fourth graders," she said. "The experience has benefited both groups."

The fourth graders had the opportunity to meet their penpals on Monday when the class took a field trip to SIUC. The students toured the University Museum and the Daily Egyptian.

Michigan trio leads UPI All-America selections

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three Michigan players, led by Heisman Trophy favorite Desmond Howard, and 1990 Heisman winner Ty Detmer of Brigham Young highlighted the United Press International All-America football team announced Tuesday.

The No. 3-ranked Wolverines were the only team to place three players on the first team, determined by a consensus of UPI sports writers across the nation. No. 1 Washington and No. 6 Florida State, which held down the No. 1 spot for 11 weeks this year, each produced two All-America players.

Howard, expected to become the first Heisman recipient from Michigan since Tom Harmon in 1940, won the Maxwell Award last weekend as the nation's top player.

Heisman candidate Howard at head of team

Teamates joining him on the All-America roster were linebacker Erick Anderson, the Butkus Award winner, and tackle Greg Skrepenak.

Detmer, the latest in a long line of passers from Brigham Young, is the only repeat first-team selection from last year. Washington State's Jason Hanson, the 1989 All-America kicker as a sophomore, regained his first-team position this season.

Washington, which will play Michigan in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day, was represented by defensive lineman Steve Emtman and wide receiver Mario Bailey. Emtman scored an awards double for linemen this season, winning the Outland and Lombardi trophies.

Cotton Bowl-bound Florida State placed two members of its defense on the first team — linebacker Marvin Jones and cornerback Terrell Buckley. Jones was the only sophomore named to the first team, while Buckley was winner of the Thorpe Award as the nation's top defensive back.

Linebacker Darrin Smith was the lone representative from No. 2 Miami, which joins Washington as the only two undefeated teams in the country.

Howard led the nation with 23 touchdowns this season — 19 as a receiver, one on a reverse and two as a return specialist. He returned both a kickoff and a punt 93 yards for touchdowns.

He caught a touchdown pass in his first 10 games this season, setting an NCAA record for most consecutive games with a TD reception and becoming only the third player in history to record a scoring catch in 10 regular-season games. He averaged a touchdown every 3.2 catches and a score every 4.17 times he touches the ball, including runs and kick returns.

"Desmond made every play he had to make this year," Michigan receivers coach Cam Cameron said. "A lot of guys make plays, but not for 11 games. Teams play every kind of defense to try to take him out of the play. But we keep going to him and he keeps catching it."

Detmer, the subject of criticism after BYU lost its first five games after he won the Heisman last year, rebounded to lead the Cougars to an 8-0-1 mark the rest of the way.

than what appears in the box score, said her coach.

"When we come up the floor we want the ball in Anita's hands," The 15th year coach said. "We've never had anyone who could get the ball down the floor quicker."

In the Salukis first contest of the season they routed Illinois on the home hardwood 73-48. Since then the women have never looked back, passing out defeats to Murray State, Tennessee Tech and a tough Wisconsin squad.

Anita Scott said the Salukis' success comes from enthusiasm about the quicker pace.

"This is the way we like to play," she said. "I played a fast-paced game in high school so I knew what was expected of me coming into this season."

"I think everyone is optimistic because we know we have a chance to be really good with this offense."

The Salukis have gone from a team in transition to the top of the gateway Conference, and Anita Scott said their next goal is a trip to the NCAA tournament in March.

"Things are coming together really well," she said. "At the start of the season we weren't sure about what to expect from the offense. But now we're playing with a lot of enthusiasm and we're starting to think about our long-term goals."

Cindy Scott said she expects a bright future with Anita Scott running the offensive game.

"In her first two seasons Anita showed a lot of raw talent," she said. "Now we're getting a look at what she really can do. She's really key to our success this season."

must be at the top of our game."

"Their record doesn't show how good they are because they have played some tough teams," Scott said. "We have not watched them play this season, so we don't know that much about them."

The Lady Bears return four starters from a team that went 26-5 last season, and 16-2 in the league.

Southwest sneaked past SIUC in the Gateway Championship to take the league title, but lost in the NCAA Tournament to eventual champion Tennessee.

Wichita was ranked fifth in the preseason poll and finished 6-21 overall last season.

Southwest Missouri coach Cheryl Burnett said her team is prepared and excited to play SIUC.

"We lost a lot of power defensively from last year," she said, "and being ranked first over SIUC is putting pressure on us. But we will just have to make prepared."

Scott said the first conference games are vital for the team.

"This beginning trip can make or break our season," Scott said.

Five with 300 saves honored at winter meetings

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Bulpen aces Rollie Fingers, Jeff Reardon, Lee Smith, Rich Gossage and Bruce Sutter were inducted Tuesday into Rollie's inaugural 300-save club.

Fingers was the first to reach 300 saves and is the all-time leader with 341 over 17 seasons. Famous for his handlebar mustache, Fingers, who retired in 1985, was the American League's Most Valuable Player and Cy Young winner in 1981 with Milwaukee.

"Rollie's the guy who really put relief pitching on the map," Gossage said.

Fingers pitched for Oakland, San Diego and Milwaukee. In 1981 he became the first reliever to win the Cy Young and MVP awards in the same season.

"I never thought I'd get it because at the time I was having some arm troubles," Fingers said. "It was exciting because no one had ever gotten there before."

Reardon is second on the all-time list with 327 saves. He is the only reliever to save 40 or more games in a season in both leagues. He had 41 in 1985 with Montreal, 42 in 1988 with Minnesota and 40 last season with Boston.

Reardon notched his 300th save May 20 and could pass Fingers in June.

"Over time, I think I've crept up on a lot of records," he said. "I'm looking forward to catching Rollie."

Smith picked up his 300th save Aug. 2, and now has 312 for third place on the list. His 47 saves in 1991 broke the National League record. Smith, 34, said his move from the Chicago Cubs to St. Louis may have saved his career.

"For some reason, I thought I was headed for the old folks home," he said. "That happens when you get traded. But I guess I still have a couple pitches left in me."

Gossage, a free agent, has 308 career saves in 19 seasons. In 1975 and 1978 he led the

AL with saves.

He has saved 20 or more games 10 times, including seven consecutive seasons (1980-86). He has finished six All-Star Games.

"You have to have a big ego — more than an ego—you have to have that hunger," Gossage said.

Sutter, who retired after the 1988 season, picked up his 300th save in his final major league appearance. Possessing a split-fingered fastball, Sutter led the NL in saves five times from 1979 to 1984 and went nine consecutive seasons with 20 or more saves. He won the Cy Young in 1979 with the Cubs.

Catcher sent from Indians to Houston

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The Houston Astros hope to have filled their catching vacancy Tuesday, acquiring Ed Taubensee in a four-player deal with Cleveland.

The Astros acquired Taubensee and pitcher Willie Blair for outfielder Kenny Lofton and infielder Dave Rohde.

The 23-year-old Taubensee batted .242 with no homers and eight RBI in 26 games with the Indians.

At Triple A Colorado Springs, he hit .310 in 91 games with 13 homers and 39 RBI in his first season above the Class A level.

Houston Manager Art Howe said Craig Biggio, who had a .990 fielding percentage behind the plate in 139 games, was moving to second base and Taubensee was expected to take over behind the plate.

Taubensee had a rough introduction to the majors. In his second recall on Sept. 5, he was hitless in his first 23 major league at-bats.

Angels pick up Brooks in swap of outfielders

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The New York Mets Tuesday traded veteran Hubie Brooks to the California Angels for outfielder Dave Gallagher, reuniting him with Mets Manager Jeff Torborg.

Gallagher won't break into the high-priced trio of Vince Coleman, Howard Johnson and Bobby Bonilla, but can be a fourth outfielder.

"I like just about everything he does," Torborg said. "He's an excellent role player. He can play the field and he has the ability to accept his role."

Gallagher, 31, batted .293 for the Angels with one homer and 30 RBI, but is very familiar to Torborg who had the utility outfielder in 1988 and '89 when both were with the White Sox.

Brooks, 35, batted .238 in 103 games with the Mets with 16 homers and 50 RBI. In December 1990, he was dealt from Los Angeles to the Mets for pitchers Bob Ojeda and Greg Hansell.

The Angels will be Brooks' fourth team in as many years. It will be his first American League team in 12 major league seasons.

"Our feeling was it would be difficult for Hubie to get much playing time," Mets general manager Al Harazin said.

Milwaukee sends reliever out west

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The Milwaukee Brewers Tuesday traded pitcher Chuck Crim to the California Angels for pitchers Mike Fetters and Glenn Carter.

Crim, 30, was 8-5 with a 4.63 ERA in 66 games, all as a reliever. He is 33-31 with a 3.47 ERA with 42 saves in 332 games in five major league seasons with Milwaukee, and led the American League in appearances in 1988 and 1989.

The Brewers were ready to part with Crim because he had not pitched at the same level, although a rib cage injury slowed him in 1990.

Fetters, who turns 27 on Dec. 19, split time between the Angels and Triple A Edmonton. In 19 games with California, the right-hander was 2-5 with a 4.84 ERA over 44 2-3 innings. He was 2-7 with a 4.87 ERA in 61 innings at Edmonton.

Carter, 24, was 6-0 with a 1-6 record and 8.62 ERA in eight games with the Midland

California signs Finley to four-year extension

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The California Angels Tuesday signed pitcher Chuck Finley to a four-year, $18.5 million contract extension.

"I called a few clubs already to tell them to stop asking about Chuck Finley because I've got him for the next four years," Angels general manager Whitey Herzog said.

Finley would've been eligible for free agency at the end of the 1992 season.

The 29-year-old left-hander was 18-9 with a 3.80 ERA in 34 starts last season. He had two complete games and two shutouts in 227 1-3 innings. Opposing batters finished with a .244 average against him.

Finley's 18 wins improved his career record to 66-50, seventh on the Angels' all-time list. Among left-handers, only Frank Tanana (102) and Clyde Wright (87) have more victories.

A first-round selection in January 1985, Finley had only 18 games of minor league experience before joining the Angels full time in May 1986.

Herzog said signing Finley is just another step in his master plan. So far, the Angels have acquired outfielder Von Hayes, reliever Chuck Crim and outfielder Hubie Brooks.

Witness states 'Rocket' looked rocked prior to brawl in saloon

HOUSTON (UPI) — Star pitcher Roger Clemens and his brother appeared drunk before becoming involved in a fight at a bar in January, a witness said Tuesday.

If convicted on the misdemeanor charge of hindering the arrest of his brother Randy, the 29-year-old Boston Red Sox pitcher could be fined $2,000 and sentenced to a year in jail.

He pleaded not guilty before County Criminal Court-At-Law Judge Jim Barkley. Attorneys estimate the trial, which started Monday, will take one week.

Brian Jackson, the first witness, said he saw the Clemens brothers arrive at the bar, and he was watching them when salesman Ellis Lee Herron Jr. walked past their table and an argument ensued.

Herron and his date were arguing with the brothers when Randy Clemens pushed the woman backward "pretty hard," Jackson said.

It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe. You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter's dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

If Galileo had used Vivarin, maybe he could have mastered the solar system faster, too.

better that mark when he posted a 42 point performance against Bradley in 1988.

Amaya could challenge Rick Shipley for No. 14 on the SIUC all-time scoring list by the end of the season. Shipley has 533 career points and Amaya had 332 heading into the 1991-92 season.

Mike Glenn, a four-year starter from 1974-1977, is the all-time points leader in the Arena. Amaya would have to average 22 points in his last 25 games in the Arena to top Glenn.

THE SALUKIS utilized one of their greatest assets in beating South Alabama Monday night—the bench.

When starters Amaya, Tyrone Bell and benchman Mirko Pavlovic fouled out of the game, it was up to three underclassmen and two first-year subs to protect the Dawgs narrow advantage.

South Alabama closed to within one point of the lead with two minutes left in the game. But, the Saluki subs hit eight straight free throws and held the Jaguars to just two more points to preserve the 93-84 victory.

Earlier in the game Pavlovic came off the bench to hit two key three-pointers to widen the Dawgs' lead.

Head coach Rich Herrin hasn't used the same starting lineup two games in a row. He said the Salukis' 5-0 start is an example of the team effort.

"You don't win games with just five guys," Herrin said. "We win with total team effort. We lost three of our top six players (Monday night), yet the guys were able to come off the bench and finish up for us."

FIVE SALUKIS scored in double figures Monday night, including four starters.

Amaya, the Dawgs' leading scorer, also was the games top scorer. The junior forward finished with 24 points and 9 rebounds. Amaya averages 23.8 points a game.

Sophomore center Marcelo da Silva scored and rebounded in double figures for the second consecutive game. He had 14 points and 11 rebound, Monday after collecting 16 points and 16 boards Saturday against Austin

Peay.

Also scoring in double figures were freshman Marcus Timmons. Junior Anthony Smith and sophomore Chris Lowery had 11. All of Lowery's points came in the second half.

THE DAWGS' season will continue while the SIUC campus is vacated for the holiday break.

SIUC will play 10 games during the vacation including seven at home. The Dawgs also open their Missouri Valley Conference Dec. 21 at home against Indiana State.

Saluki fans can watch in the comforts of their own homes on Jan. 11 and 20. The SIUC games against Northern Illinois and Bradley will be televised on ESPN.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK: "I don't care much about media time outs. I call time outs when I want them and I think we need them. Shoot, last night I tried to call one and we went down and scored. I just sat back down and clapped."—Rich Herrin said Monday about media time outs.

PRESSBOX, from Page 32

Lawrence was averaging 14 points and 6.5 rebounds a game and led the Salukis in steals before chipping a bone in his left ankle. The Salukis' bench depth has filled the void, but Herrin admits that Lawrence is hard to replace.

Herrin also could ask Saint Nick to schedule the rest of the Salukis' games in the Arena.

The Dawgs have dominated on their home wood since the facility opened in 1964. Since first defeating Oklahoma State, SIUC has racked up a 263-96 home court record. They have never lost an opener since they started play in the Arena.

And maybe Santa could use some of his pull to make sure the Salukis get some recognition come NCAA tournament time.

Despite three consecutive winning seasons, including a 26-8 MVC title season of 1989-90, the Dawgs have been stiffed by the NCAA tournament selections committee.

SIUC was the preseason favorite by coaches and media to win the MVC this year. But, unless they can also win the conference tournament, they could get overlooked again.

Finally, if there is room under the tree, Santa should include a personalized oxygen tank and pulse alarm to monitor his vital functions while his team is on the floor.

The Dawgs have had to come from behind in all of their thrilling victories. If the Salukis don't blow their opponent away, Herrin—who is known for his vocalty—could blow more than just his top.

These few extras on Herrin's list could give him what is well deserved—an MVC championship and an NCAA post season bid. Until that time comes, he only has the visions of basketballs bouncing in his head.

Merry Christmas Rich Herrin. Here's hoping your holiday wishes come true. Just hope your stocking is big enough.
